

Student Designed Communities (SDCs) allow groups of upperclass students with a concept for a theme community to propose their ideas and turn it into a year-long residential reality. This living option is application-based and will be reviewed by the Program Community Committee in College Houses & Academic Services.

Here are the basics:

- A minimum of 12 students are required to propose an idea
- SDCs will partner with the House Director and the senior staff of their assigned House with the execution of programming
- If accepted, students will still need to submit a housing application
- Enrollment in an SDC may be opened to other interested students during the room selection process, but students involved in the original proposal process will receive first priority to room assignments
- Selected programs can be canceled if they do not meet certain enrollment requirements

Important Dates:

- Friday, November 7: SDC Applications are due to College Houses and Academic Services (CHAS)
- Friday, November 7 – Wednesday, November 12: College Houses will review proposals and conduct interviews with applicants
- Late November : CHAS will release decisions about SDC applications; SDCs may be matched, declined, or wait-listed

Information you'll need to apply:

In order to apply for a SDC, the following information will be required:

- Name of student program lead who will serve as the liaison to CHAS
- Name of a faculty or staff advisor who will work with the community
- Clear description as to what the SDC offers the students who will be involved
- List of participation expectations in order for students to get the most out of the program
- Tentative schedule of events
- Tentative budget
- A list of at least twelve (12) students committed to participating in the SDC
